Day 60 - Waterloo Bridge, Somerset House and Indian Suppers

April 11, 2013 By Gemma Peppe

Today I went into the offices of Dartmouth Films who I'm making my new film with. They are in Somerset House. It's a great place to have an office. They go to all the exhibitions at the Courtauld Institute and they see all the gigs and outdoor film screenings for free.

Another difference between the last treatment and this one is how mobile I am. On the last treatment I couldn't walk from my house to Clapham Junction which is about 100 yards. On this treatment walking clears my head. Today I walked over Waterloo Bridge to The Strand which despite the grey skies was still uplifting. That bridge always makes me happy to be a Londoner.

That said I'm more worn out this week than I've been throughout the last two months.

I think it's because I've got so much work on. The last two days I've texted Louie from Waterloo so that he meets me from the train. I lean on him on the walk back to our flat. He's also cooked us supper the last two days. Yesterday this involved logging onto Hungry House and ordering us an Indian.

The pic, for those of you who've not been there is Somerset House.

This entry was originally published April 11, 2013 on The Hepatitis C Trust. Reprinted with permission.

© 2026 Smart + Strong All Rights Reserved.