Generic Harvoni A Slight Delay for the Release

November 11, 2015 By Greg Jefferys

10th November 2015

I received news from India that the committee meeting to give approval for the release of generic Harvoni ended without final approval being granted.

Because the week beginning on the 8th of November and ending the 14th has three significant religious festival days in it I have have been told that it is unlikely that that committee will reconvene before the 15th of November when, it is expected, approval will be granted.

Once approval is actually granted it will be a few days before shipments can begin as the inevitable piles of paperwork must first be completed by the different companies.

So its just a small delay, annoying to be sure, but it is just a small delay and that is life.
