Personal Support and Helpful Tools to Help you through your Hep C Journey

August 5, 2015 By Connie M. Welch

Personal support and helpful tools can make the difference to help Hep C patients through their journey with Hep C. Pack Health is a power packed resource to help each Hep C patient reach their goal, to be cured of Hep C.

I highly recommend Pack Health for their extensive hands on, and personal support they offer Hep C patients and their families. Battling Hep C is difficult enough without fighting it alone. Pack Health can help make a difficult journey easier to get through, here's why. . .

The journey with Hepatitis C is different for every individual. It can be a long journey that sometimes causes us to become weary.

This is part of the reason why it is important to get plugged in to a support group and find ways to ensure that you do not feel alone with your Hepatitis C. With new treatment and more awareness to Hep C, there are more resources becoming available to help you reach your goals, stay healthy, and live a long and happy life.

A new company, Pack Health, has launched a program specifically for Hepatitis C. Right now, Pack Health has 100 free programs available to patients for free (thanks to a medical education grant they received. The program is valued at $299). You can sign up for your free program at Pack Health.

To learn more about Pack Health, read the rest of Connie's blog, Life Beyond Hepatitis C, June 29, 2015. Article reprinted with permission.

© 2026 Smart + Strong All Rights Reserved.